Organizations everywhere strive to provide superior customer experiences, while keeping pace with rapidly changing IT trends. Businesses need to be certain that they can respond quickly to customer needs. Inefficient legacy systems coupled with changing customer requirements and business needs, can put an immense strain on valuable resources, disrupt processes, and negatively impact productivity.

By introducing a cloud native and application development strategy into digital transformation, organizations can improve overall customer experience, reinforce business innovation, and bolster operational efficiency. Organizations can deliver business functionality faster to meet the demands of IT and customers.

Sogeti has the expertise to collaborate with organizations throughout their digital transformation. Enabling dynamic cloud native development, OneNative integrates a strong cloud foundation based on a robust strategy to manage a hybrid cloud environment. It also enables a digital culture that supports microservices and a DevOps approach.

Why Embark on a cloud native transformation?

By utilizing a modern cloud native and application development model, organizations can bolster operational efficiency to deliver agility and increased application functionality. To implement the cloud native transformation and accelerate the pace of applications through the SDLC, Sogeti enables implementation of DevOps way of working to deliver an out-of-the-box PaaS. OneNative uses containers as a potential landing platform to simplify the development of microservices to reliably scale and orchestrate.

By embarking on a cloud native transformation with Sogeti's team of experts, organizations can:

- Transform your business: Rapidly introduce new products and services to market
- Optimize operational efficiency: Build on automated processes that enable continuous processes while reducing operational costs
- Be Enterprise ready: Accelerate business innovations by using Sogeti OneNative and reduce costs by 25%

Major insurance organization improves IT velocity with cloud native applications using Microsoft Azure Service Fabric

This Fortune 500 insurance company provides niche-market insurance products in property, casualty, life, and health insurance sectors. Having acquired several companies, this organization needed to develop a new, modular platform to replace its existing, disparate line of business applications.

The challenge:

While many of the newly acquired companies leveraged similar processes, there was an inability among the organizations to combine services or move work between groups.

The solution:

With Sogeti's cloud native thought leadership and proven approach to design and enable a cloud native architecture, the insurance organization was able to realize the following business improvements:

- Rapidly introduce new business services to market
- Achieve faster client onboarding and B2B integrations with other platforms
- Gain operational cost reduction through the automation of processes
- Take advantage of a platform as the foundation and roadmap for future applications and a basis to extend other existing applications

Become the industry leader providing fast and superior services at low cost with better analytics and innovative technologies.
