Many organisations want to change their UEM platform but are concerned by the time, effort and cost…

Large organisations migrating 000's of users manually can take many months, if not years, to complete. Manual enrolment campaigns are a large draw on IT resources, are disruptive to the End User and impact and organisations productivity. This approach makes tracking progress extremely difficult and spotting recurring problems is hard to do. Overall, a manual migration project significantly increases the chance of process errors resulting in poor user experience.
