

People at the heart of your digital transformation

About Mixit

At Mixit we develop fitting digital workplaces. We do so by finding a sustainable balance between employees, organization and technology. Technological innovations are developing at an exponential rate. No longer is technology holding us back from success: it is about how enable people to create value out of technology.

When we develop digital workplaces we put employees at the heart of the process. We aim to make their work more meaningful, fun and easier. In the end it is about 'happy people, better world'.

Mixit Way Of Work

To achieve happy people and a better world through technology, we believe companies that invest in digital transformation need to put their people at the center of that process. Only then will you make sure technology adds value and employees will be happy to use it.

Our approach is based on Design Thinking. We start by understanding your organization, employees and IT landscape. By understanding the goals and challenges we can define creative technological solutions that will add value. During this process we have a strong focus on change management to make sure employees adopt the new way of working without any problems.

Fit for Purpose

IT solutions need to add value to the people using them. Therefore we have created design thinking process with a user centric approach. Fit for purpose is about the designing IT solutions based on person's, their goals, work processes and digital skills. This is a continuous process in digital transformation as needs of employees and organizational goals are always changing.

Change management

Whenever implementing new solutions or processes these changes need to be managed in your organizations. Our change management approach consists of 5 steps based on communication and adoption solutions. We make sure employees understand the 'what's in it for them' and are enabled to use the new technology.

Analytics

Analytics is the key to measuring the success of new solutions. Understanding the impact of new technology helps us to determine next steps of improvement for the digital workplace. We measure KPI's such as employee satisfaction, effective usage and organizational goals.
