Pay only for active users

Most companies charge you per user no matter how many people actively use the software.

Rydoo does things differently! We charge by the number of active users, defined as the average number of employees who actively use the platform. Depending on the client's needs, this number may vary monthly, so all employees can access the platform without paying a full license for each employee. Moreover, we will also charge a one-time fee according to the project's complexity for the implementation process.

The number of active users for the first year is based on your historical data or estimation. After every contract year, the previous 12 months will be evaluated based on actual usage to have a more accurate average of active users for the following year. Simple, transparent, and fair pricing.
