The IDP (Intelligent Document Processing) market size is poised to increase exponentially, with estimations showing that it will reach the worth of the US $9.18 billion by 2031*, at a CAGR of 25.8% from 2024 to 2031*. This growth could be driven by the constant increase in the volume of unstructured data like documents and emails, coupled with the critical business requirements to automate document workflows, and traditional methods are slow, error-prone, and costly, are further driving growth.

The market is heading towards:

Solution-driven Growth: Research says that the "solution" segment will likely capture the largest IDP market share. That corresponds to an increase in the demand for end-to-end document processing solutions.

Cloud-native: The cloud deployment type is expected to rule the IDP market during the forecast period because it is very scalable, secure, and easily accessible.

AI/ML Adoption: Be it any industry, the future will belong to AI and ML which is the cornerstone of intelligent document processing. This shift helps businesses to automate complex workflows and make decisions that will revolutionize business processes with deeper insights from the data.
